

About Us

Hamilton Madison House's Asian American Recovery Services (AARS) is a leading nationwide outpatient mental health service. We support your recovery journey, collaborate with criminal justice professionals, and address forensic and case management needs. Our holistic approach covers mental and physical well-being, emotional resilience, and life skills. Recovery is individualized and self-determined.

Staff

Our staff are a team of highly responsible professionals and administrators. Here, you will find highly experienced staff of Chinese bilingual and bicultural counselors, psychiatrists, nurse, peer advocate, and support staff. We can provide services in English, Mandarin, and Cantonese.

Eligibility

The program serves all of NYC residents with no discrimination on gender, sexual orientation, race, or income. Services are open to all ethnicities beyond the Asian population.

The program mainly serves adults, but adolescents can be admitted based on cultural needs. Clients must have substance-use related issues. We are available for personal meetings and client consultations whenever required.

Mission

Our mission is to enhance the mental health and recovery of community residents through emotional, behavioral, social, and psychiatric interventions. At AARS, our treatment philosophy is to establish connections with you and your social supports to promote growth and empowerment.

The program aims to:

1. Deliver substance use and psychiatric services to individuals, couples, and families.
2. Establish a community network for referrals and collaborate with other agencies to develop a comprehensive continuum of care for community mental health needs.
3. Offer consultative services to patients, potential patients, and the community at-large.
4. Conduct outreach and educational training for the community.
5. Advocate for the overall well-being of community residents.

Clients can pick the type of therapy that works best for them depending on their needs and therapeutic appropriateness.
